Brian Viner's Cable Stars

Not just a scream queen ...

Rachel Grant is better known to Sci-Fi viewers as Nina, the predatory host of Sci-Fright. In the flesh, however, she is sweeter than sweet, and names Tootsie, Gone with the Wind and The Sound of Music as three of her favourite films. What, no Poltergeist or Nightmare on Elm Street? 'Oh yeah, I've always liked horror films,' she says. 'In fact, my mum gave me a rubber Freddy Krueger hand for my 11th birthday, and I've still got it. I love Hitchcock too. He's my main guy. Psycho, that's a nice one.' Nice? 'Yeah, lovely film.'

Hitchcock always had an eye for a pretty girl, as does another film director of a different calibre, Michael Winner. When Grant was 19 she spent six months as Winner's receptionist: 'I really liked him, but I didn't fancy him,' she says. I feign astonishment, but the irony seems to pass her by. 'He introduced me to lots of famous people, even Marlon Brando.'

The looks that got her to meet the stars also landed Grant a small part in an Emmerdale video, and more excitingly, a role as Angelina Jolie's body-double on the film Tomb Raider, due out next month. 'Apparently, they had difficulty finding someone with the same measurements, and I was the closest,' she says. Did she get a chance to study Jolie's child-bearing lips? 'Yeah, and they're all hers.'

Murray moves into the slow lane

As Murray Walker approaches the final lap of a commentating career that began in 1949, I ask him which drivers, and which races, have captivated him most? After all, this urbane 77-year-old may be famous for his microphone bloopers, but for breadth of motor-racing knowledge there is nobody to match him.

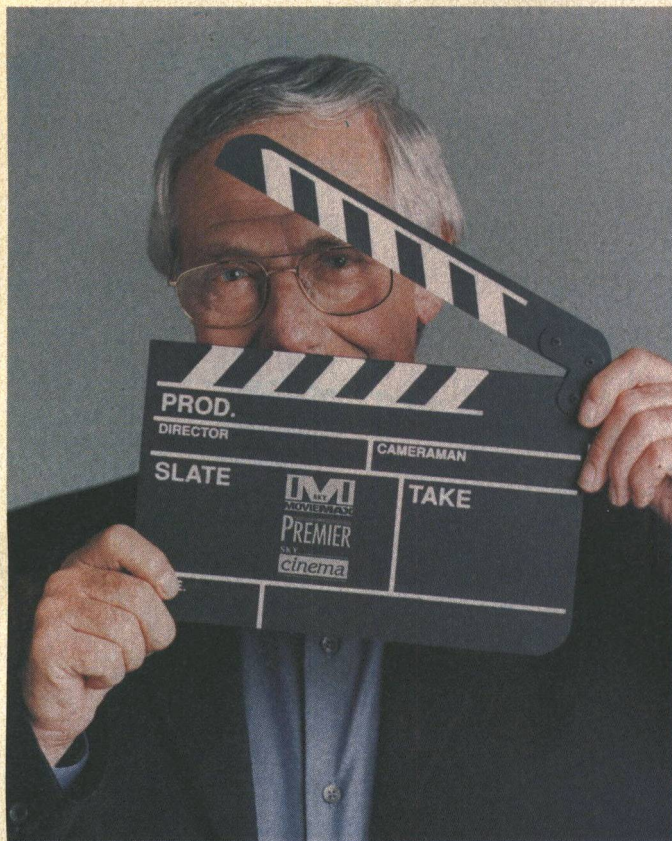

'Among drivers, my one-two-three are Fangio, Prost and Senna,' he says. 'After Senna I would place Stirling Moss, who may not have won the world championship, but kindled British enthusiasm in motor racing and was by any yardstick utterly outstanding. And my current number five is Michael Schumacher, although he will probably go on to be the greatest of all time. I carry a gigantic torch for Schumacher. Only Senna had his uncanny facility for motoring through traffic. It was a great pity that we never saw them racing at the height of their powers.'

As for the most memorable races he has seen, Walker first harks back to the 1961 Monaco Grand Prix, dashing won by Moss. 'Stirling was younger than me, but nevertheless one of my gods. These days my wife and I go on cruises with the Mosses, and I sometimes have to pinch myself that he and I talk as friends, not on a fan-and-hero basis.

'The Italian Grand Prix at Monza in 1971, when 4/100ths of a second covered the first four home, that was remarkable, too. Senna winning the Brazilian Grand Prix stuck in sixth gear; Jim Clark in a Lotus, rejoining the race a lap down and retaking the lead; Jackie Stewart at the old Nurburgring, winning in appalling conditions by four minutes, with his hand in a plaster cast; Mansell in a Ferrari in 1990 passing Gerhard Berger in Mexico, on a corner where going round flat out, one at a time, was regarded as the ultimate in courage ...' Walker draws a deep breath. Impending retirement has by no means dulled his enthusiasm. 'If I hadn't seen that I wouldn't have believed it,' he says, with feeling.

Norman's conquest

There is no point asking Barry Norman – retiring as a film critic this month after nigh on 30 years – to nominate his favourite films. As he says, it all depends what kind of mood he's in. However, I catch him shortly after he has watched Ninotchka, the 1939 comedy starring Greta Garbo, for the umpteenth time, and he is still purring. He generally has little time for those who say that they don't make 'em like they used to, but in Ninotchka's case it's true, he says. 'Subtlety, sophistication and wit are singularly lacking in the movies now. That's why I liked Shakespeare in Love so much, because it had those things.'

It also had Gwyneth Paltrow – a big star, but no Garbo.

I wonder, does Norman think that stars now glitter like they did 60 years ago? 'Yes, I do think that Clint Eastwood, Harrison Ford, Paul Newman, Tom Cruise, will in time be regarded as just as big, just as charismatic as their predecessors were. I still think that Michelle Pfeiffer is the most beautiful woman on screen, and Julia Roberts has the same vulnerable quality that Marilyn Monroe had. Mind you, I think she's a variable actress. Like everyone else, I loved her in Pretty Woman. All hookers should be like that, but none are, as far as I know. And I was hugely impressed by her in Erin Brockovich. But in The Mexican she gave a terrible performance – just awful.'

Norman does not sit on the fence, which may be the secret of his success. Nor does he sit in hotels being mucked about by movie stars. 'Punctuality is one of my obsessions,' he says. 'I once flew to Paris to interview Madonna at the Ritz Hotel. The interview had already been put back an hour, and then I was kept waiting even longer. The PR woman came in and said, "I guess we're a little late." I said, "No, you're not a little late, you're an hour and 40 minutes late, and I have had no explanation, let alone an apology." She said, "I really don't want to bring my artiste into all this hostility." So I said, "Then don't bother," and I left. It was unprofessional of me, no doubt, but I could not have conducted a civil interview.' He never did get to meet Madonna. Her loss, I'd say.

Barry Norman's Film Night, Sky Premier, Thursdays 7.30pm until 21st

The birth of a new career for Ricki?

Surprising question: what does a 32-year-old woman with her own acclaimed talk show, plenty of money in the bank, no shortage of acting offers, a happy marriage and a healthy young son lack? Surprising clue: it is something she desires so fiercely that to pursue it she is prepared to give up her multi-million dollar earnings. Surprising answer: a career as a midwife. Yes, Ricki Lake wants to make a living delivering other women's babies. Not only that, but she assures me that she will do it. 'I'm very passionate about it, and, when I'm finished and I get out of the fame game, I will do it,' she says. I believe her, too.

Lake is pregnant again herself and intends to have her baby at home, which in America is akin to saying that you intend to vote Communist. It's simply not done. 'My friends think I'm crazy, out of my mind,' she says. 'And that's my goal. To get Americans to be more open about home birth. It's much more widely accepted in Europe. In Holland it's practically the norm.' Lake's first child was born straightforwardly at a birth centre. He is called Milo. 'My husband chose the name. I don't know why.' Her parents, for whom Milo is the first grandchild, treat him like 'the Second Coming,' she says. 'He's everything to them, but he's a well-adjusted child. He gets things he wants, but we make sure there are things he wants that he doesn't get.'

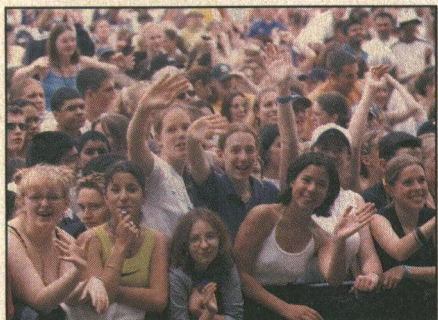

It is not, as in most families, a question of affordability. Since landing her debut acting role in the John Waters film Hairspray – '500 fat girls auditioned, and I was the lucky fat girl,' she tells me – Lake's career has gone into orbit, underpinned by her undoubted talent and considerable common sense. From 1993, when her show Ricki Lake began, her role model has been Oprah Winfrey. 'I think Oprah is incredibly smart and she's been very nice to me. In the beginning she allowed me to watch her show and see the way she does it. I learnt a lot from her.' Not how to deal with a breech birth, though. Watch this space.

Action speaks louder

Tom Cruise is a fully paid-up member of the Hollywood elite, yet he still insisted on performing his own death-defying stunts in the action adventure Mission: Impossible 2. Interview: Lawrie Masterson

LET'S face it, a star as popular and powerful as Tom Cruise does not need to do his own stunts. After all, they have experts to handle that sort of thing. But in Mission: Impossible 2, the actor insisted on fearlessly hurling himself into the film's extreme action work-outs, including an incredible sequence where he hangs precariously on a cliff, then jumps from one part of the face-to another, 'slipping' in the process.

With the actor literally hundreds of metres above the ground and shooting the scene seven times to ensure it was right, director John Woo could have been forgiven for keeping his fingers tightly crossed. Cruise himself had no such worries.

'I know John was very nervous when I was doing it, but I had a lot of fun making the movie,' says the 38-year-old star. 'That was one of the greatest days I had on the picture. It was a beautiful day and to be out on that mountain and climb it ... well, it was just great fun.'

'When I did the jump down I felt fine. I wasn't nervous at all.' He pauses for a moment, grins shyly, then adds: 'It was a long jump, though!'

The film, producer Cruise's second spin-off from the TV series of the 1960s, sees his character, Impossible Missions Force special agent Ethan Hunt, and his computer genius sidekick Luther Stickell (Ving Rhames), on the trail of villain Sean Ambrose (Dougray Scott), whose plan is to spread a deadly virus for which he alone has the antidote. Along the way, Hunt enlists the help of helicopter pilot Billy Baird (John Polson) and beautiful professional thief Nyah Hall (Thandie Newton).

But for all his scenes of daredevil bravado, Cruise is the first to admit how heavily he relied on specialist stunt advisors and how carefully he examined his own physical limitations.

'I wouldn't do the stunts just to go out on a limb,' he insists. 'A lot of time and effort goes into it. I had this process where Keith Campbell [his stunt double] and Brian Smrz [stunt co-ordinator on the movie] would go through the faulty points of the stunt and clear them up for me.'

'They knew what I was physically capable of and when I arrived on set, they'd say, "Look, we have a level of pain. It's going to hurt this much." If it was a stunt which I felt wasn't smart or wasn't necessary for the picture, I wouldn't do it. I don't see myself as a person who takes risks. I see it as something I have to do and I enjoy it.'

In fact, Cruise says one stunt scheduled to be performed during filming in Sydney was hastily rearranged because of safety fears.

Woman with a mission

She may not find her Mission: Impossible 2 co-star Tom Cruise attractive, but English actress Thandie Newton tells Garth Pearce he's a dream to work with

THANDIE NEWTON had four messages on her answerphone within hours of an audition for M:I-2 – two from Tom Cruise and two from director John Woo. Both wanted to be first to tell her that she had been chosen as Cruise's co-star.

Newton, 28, who lives in London with screenwriter husband Oliver Parker (who wrote the recent crime drama It Was an Accident, in which she starred) and nine-month-old daughter Ripley, recalls: 'The excitement started at that moment and never stopped.'

She plays beautiful thief Nyah opposite Cruise's agent Ethan Hunt in the action thriller.

'He is down to earth and ordinary,' she says of Cruise. 'But he is also very shy and tries to keep himself far removed from the public spotlight.'

Newton appeared in Cruise's film Interview with the Vampire, but did not really get to know him on that production. She worked at 19 on her debut film, Flirting, with his now-estranged wife, Nicole Kidman.

'I can remember Nicole talking about Tom,' she recalls. 'She was set to audition for him on Days of Thunder and said, "Isn't he gorgeous?" I said, "No, I don't think so!" I know that sounds terrible, because Tom is a good-looking guy. But I like more interesting, odd men.'

Newton eventually found an interesting man of her own in husband Parker, whom she married in 1998.

'When we first met, he had a girlfriend, so we became just friends,' she says. 'Then they split up and I saw my chance. I took a deep breath and said, "Our friendship is going to be compromised in the future, because I am completely in love with you."'

Such anecdotes helped get Newton her leading role: 'Tom's idea of a screen test is to chat together in front of a camera,' she relates. 'I just told him stories of our meeting and wedding and he started cracking up. After all, I had nothing to lose.'

An honest attitude, plus respect for the arts, had always been encouraged at Newton's home in Penzance, Cornwall, by English father Nick and Zimbabwean mother Nyasha.

'Tom approaches acting the same way as I do,' she says. 'He works very hard and is never really satisfied with the results. We did plenty of takes at times, but the stories of him being difficult are nonsense. He is just a perfectionist, doing his best.'

Danger man: The fearless Cruise in action in M:I-2

'There is a sequence in the middle of the picture where I was going to do a base jump off a building in Sydney with a decelerator rig [a mechanism that catches you during the last ten feet of the fall],' he recalls, referring to a scene where he supposedly jumps out of a hole blown in the side of a skyscraper. 'But we just couldn't figure out how to do that shot, so I pulled it and we did it inside the studio.'

'But the stuff on the mountain I loved,' he continues. 'I have never been afraid of heights. The only thing I used to be afraid of was the fact that when I'd get to an edge I'd always want to jump. Not to kill myself, but because I've always wanted to fly. It's a dream I've had ever since I was a little kid.'

FROM MONDAY 11TH

Hens of honour

When the creative team behind claymation favourites Wallace & Gromit turned their talents to a feature film, the result was pure poultry in motion. Interview: Paul Wray

WHILE RUSSELL CROWE took on all comers in ancient Rome and Tom Cruise tackled another Mission: Impossible, an animated film about a coop of plucky chickens proved just as big a blockbuster at the cinemas last summer. Chicken Run, the first full-length feature film by the Bristol-based production company Aardman and its creative geniuses Nick Park (pictured) and Peter Lord, won over the world with its quirky humour and distinctive animation. Aardman's Oscar-winning triumph with Wallace & Gromit and the earlier Creature Comforts paved the way for the making of Chicken Run. However, that certainly didn't mean that for Nick and Peter it would be a guaranteed success, or that producing such unique animation would be easy – far from it. The task of producing a full-length feature film, as opposed to the TV shorts, was mammoth. It took 40 animators, under the direction of Peter and Nick, three years to produce Chicken Run. The process was arduous with every second of finished film using 24 frames, or 24 tiny adjustments, to the motion of the model characters. When you realize that the film was more than 5000 seconds long, the scale of achievement is remarkable.

The idea for Chicken Run came from a simple sketch Nick Park did of a chicken digging under a barbed wire fence with a spoon. 'I've always found chickens to be very funny,' Nick says, 'but we put them in a dramatic setting living an appalling life, trapped and put upon by humans.'

This initial idea flourished into a story about a diverse group of hens, led by the bulldog-spirited Ginger, desperate to escape their battery farm existence forced upon them by their owners, the Tweedys.

From this early story-line came the notion of having a brash, arrogant rooster crashing into the scene and so hatched the character, Rocky the rooster.

By making Rocky this American 'lone free ranger' it gave Nick and Peter avenues to explore the culture-clash comedy of having a cocky Yankee rooster in the midst of a coop of reserved English hens, and also to add a little Hollywood glamour to the movie in the voice of Mel Gibson.

'Mel was a pretty irresistible choice,' says Nick. And, agrees Peter, 'Apart from being funny, Mel brought a kind of self-deprecating humour to the role that makes Rocky incredibly charming.'

Despite their early worries ('We were shy about asking,' remembers Peter), getting the Braveheart

star didn't prove that much of an obstacle, especially as family man Mel knew of the Aardman reputation. 'I've been an admirer of theirs ever since they began making the Wallace & Gromit series. And my kids love them, too,' reveals Mel. 'They're hilarious and witty, and there's so much artistry involved – they have a real gift.'

Of course, any self-respecting Mel Gibson blockbuster has to have a love interest, and Chicken Run is no different. Even the tough-beaked Ginger, voiced by Julia Sawalha, was always going to find Rocky irresistible. Not that Ginger is a pushover. She rules the roost!

'I've always found chickens to be very funny, but we put them in a dramatic setting'

'She's very confident and is a great believer in doing what you set your mind to,' says the former Ab Fab star.

Mel and Julia only ever recorded their parts together once, at the beginning of production. The sheer time scale involved made it impossible, with Nick and Peter having to read through lines with the actors over a two-year period.

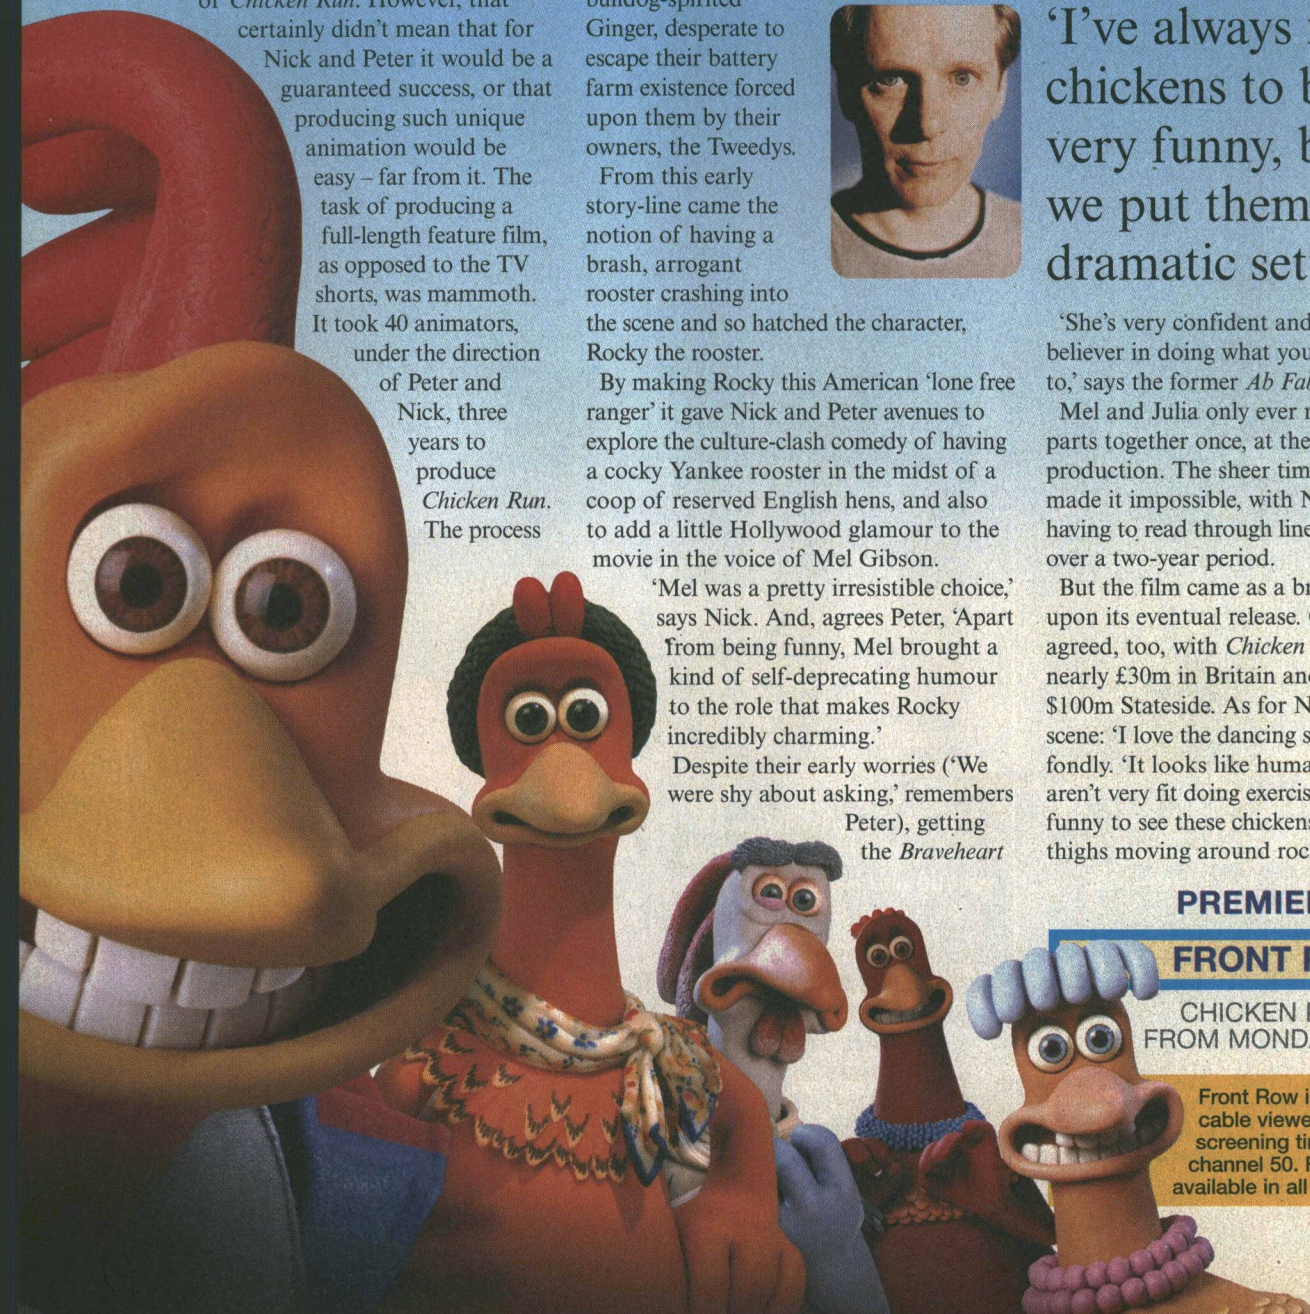

But the film came as a breath of fresh air upon its eventual release. Cinemagoers agreed, too, with Chicken Run making nearly £30m in Britain and more than $100m Stateside. As for Nick's favourite scene: 'I love the dancing sequence,' he says fondly. 'It looks like human beings who aren't very fit doing exercise. It just looks so funny to see these chickens with enormous thighs moving around rock 'n' roll style!'

All in a day's work

Discovery's Adventure Race is a tough test of endurance. Nick Griffiths spoke to Science Team member Mike Kloser, an extreme sportsman who likes to start the day by climbing a mountain

HOW DO you like starting the day? Alarm at 7.30am. English breakfast. A gentle stroll into work? Or how about alarm at 4.00am. Healthy breakfast. Climb 5000 feet up a snow-covered mountain, ski back down, then start work?

This morning, Colorado resident Mike Kloser is doing the latter – but he is squeezing in this 5.15am interview on his mobile, as he drives to base camp. Mike Kloser leads a hectic life. He's an adventure racer. Kayaking, rafting, mountain biking, trekking, rope skills (abseiling and suchlike) – these are the disciplines of his sport, amid, perhaps, jungle or glacial conditions, along irate rivers, across bottomless gorges, during several days of sleep deprivation.

Participants sometimes end up hallucinating, Kloser admits. 'I never really knew what that was like until the last couple of adventure races,' he says. 'You're sitting in a boat with your team-mates, paddling along the South China Sea, and you realize that you don't even recognize who you're talking to, and you're saying names of people who aren't even in your boat.'

Witness the typical conditions for yourself when Discovery's Adventure Race: New Zealand airs this month, chronicling last November's gruelling six-day, 364-kilometre Southern Traverse. Of the 57 four-member teams that started, only eleven completed the course.

Mike Kloser is in the Science Team, who took part in that race. Each member carried the added burden of scientific equipment, analyzing the effects of adventure racing on the human body. Among the results: our man registered 4.5 per cent body fat. Equally incredibly, he is 41 years old.

One of ten little Klosers raised in the American Midwest, Mike moved to Vail, Colorado in 1979, with its mountains, sunshine and clean air. 'That was when I started getting into the more aerobic and endurance-type sports,' he explains. 'I started running, biking and so forth, because they were the obvious things to do.' Obvious? 'Those types of activity are natural for me, but also the environment is very conducive to them. It's a lifestyle out here and I just found myself falling into habitual athletic sports. You don't want to be around me if I'm not getting regular exercise, then I'm a grumpy guy.'

Previously, Kloser was a mountain biker, racing on the World Cup circuit. Among his victories is Alaska's Iditabike. Would that be like the Iditarod – a ludicrously gruelling dog-sled race in Arctic conditions – but on a bicycle? 'Yes, it's essentially that.'

Since moving into adventure racing, his team have won Eco-Challenges in Borneo and Morocco, and came second in last year's Salomon X-Mountain series. But Kloser's next big race is Raid the North Extreme, in Newfoundland: 'Low mountains on the east coast of the States and Canada, then out in the ocean near the icebergs.' Define 'low' mountains? 'Only maybe 3000-5000 feet, something like that.' Which is still six to ten times higher than Birmingham!

Win! Discovery is giving away ten fabulous fleeces. To be in with a chance of winning one, simply answer this question:

How many teams finished the Adventure Race?

Chilling out

Dubbed the English Friends, Cold Feet has gone from strength to strength since its critically acclaimed launch in 1997. Tina Ogle joins the cast on location as they call it a wrap on the third series

A SALFORD warehouse is not the most glamorous of locations and when you throw in the driving September rain, it can seem like a damp, grisly hell. But, confounding all expectations, this tawdry concrete monstrosity is the headquarters of one of Britain's most successful dramas. Look! Is that James Nesbitt in a fetching Kenzo suit? And could that be Friends darling Helen Baxendale being tended to by a make-up artist? As more familiar faces crowd around the table dispensing hot drinks, you realize that this is Cold Feet in the making and the cast and crew need their tea.

Joining filming on the very last day of series three, there's clearly an end-of-term feel to proceedings. The six main cast members have been in Manchester for five months to shoot this eight-part series, the longest to date. Some of them are itching to party, some can't wait to get home, but for all there is a sense of release after a job well done. If hysteria hasn't set in yet, it isn't far off.

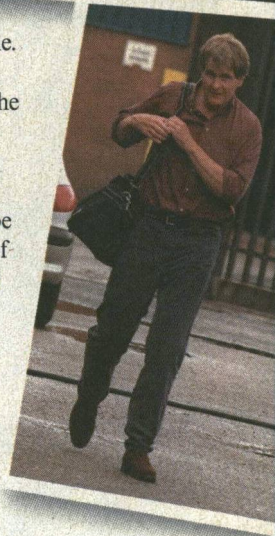

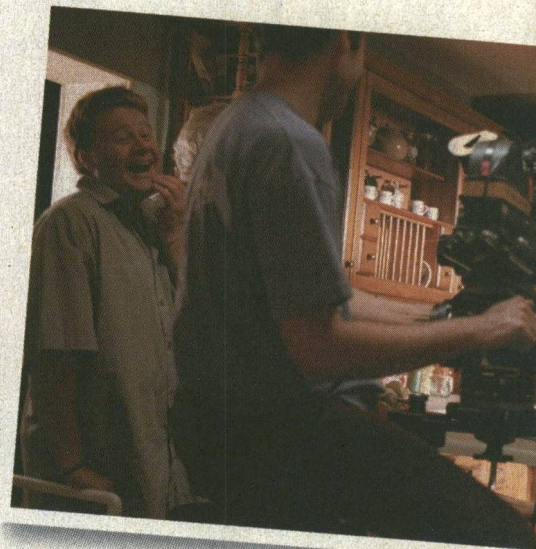

James Nesbitt, or Jimmy as he's known on set, confirms this view as he grabs a quick cigarette between takes: 'There's madness in the air today', he says, grinning. 'The wrap party's tonight and I would hope it will be riotous.'

As Adam, who concluded the award-winning pilot episode with a rose between his buttocks and a song on his lips, he has found a new level of fame. He is the first to acknowledge his debt to the comedy drama: 'It's the defining role that has pushed me on to the things that I wanted to be pushed on to. In terms of public awareness it's had a huge impact.'

Nesbitt is heading straight into the leading role in Peter (The Full Monty) Cattaneo's new movie Lucky Break, but Hermione Norris, who plays Karen, is taking a well-earned break. 'I'm feeling slightly fazed now, but I'm getting into my old MX5 tonight and heading down the M6.

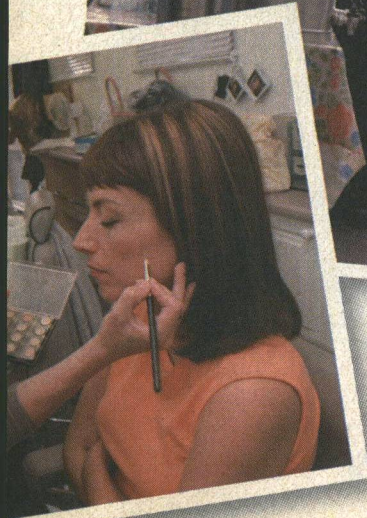

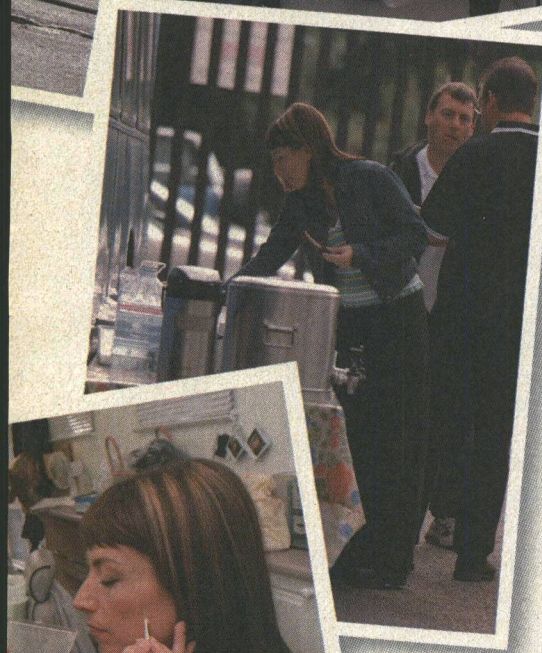

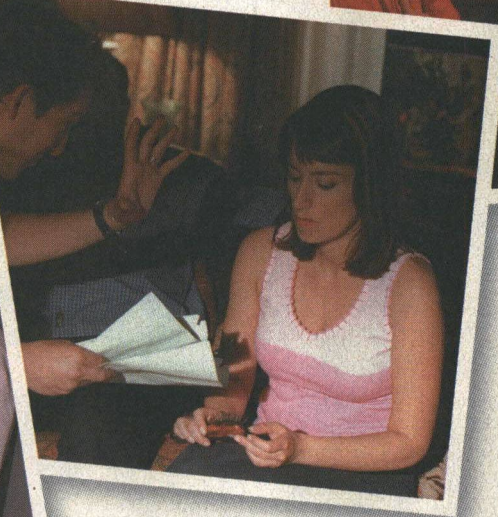

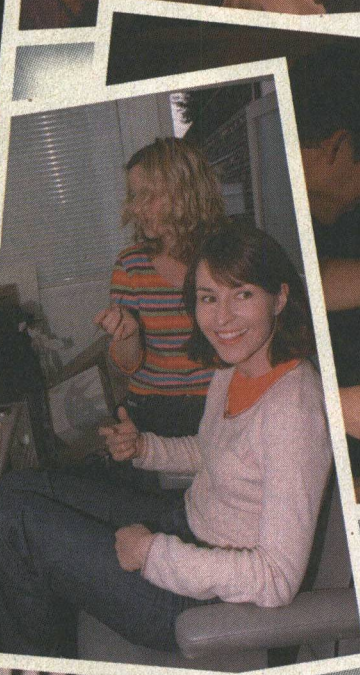

I'm going straight off on a dream trip. Flying to LA, picking up an open-top car, then off to San Francisco, Vegas and the Grand Canyon.' While she has enjoyed this third series, she feels the pressure has been greater: 'The more you do something, the more you're aware that you have to work harder. It's a fortunate position to be in, but every year it goes deeper.'

Robert Bathurst, who plays her on-screen husband David, says there is no complacency surrounding the show's success: 'What hasn't crept in is any sense of smug presumption that what we're doing is bound to work, in fact it's almost the opposite. We're worrying about what we are doing, why are we doing it like this, is it working? Every department is rigorous in trying to make it work the best they can.'

Fay Ripley, who plays the no-nonsense Jenny, is not having a good day. A scene that she and John Thomson (Pete) shot months ago is having to be re-done because of an untimely reference to Concorde. Reminded of what she said at the end of series one – that she just couldn't bear to leave the rest of the cast and wanted the job to go on forever – she grins ruefully. 'No, I'm over that now. I've worked at this for too long and I'm absolutely delighted to be going home. Not that it hasn't had the most fantastic effect on my life. I can choose stuff I want to do now, which is amazing.' A series of the pilot I Saw You, with Ripley as the star, is about to go into production and she has plans with the BBC. 'Then I've got to fit in Call My Bluff, they're keen. They are, honestly, but it's not very good as I'm dyslexic.'

John Thomson, who made his name on The Fast Show, is also feeling the pressure. Huddled onto an old vinyl sofa behind some stray scenery, he is mouthing lines. 'It's a long day today,' he says. 'Reshooting that scene, hopefully it'll all splice together.'

He looks tired and admits that eight episodes has been testing: 'I love doing this show but six was easier. Pete's had a bit more angst this series as well, which has been great but a bit more stretching.' He is looking forward to an out-take reel to be screened that evening: 'I hold the record for the most cock-ups. It was a bar scene that took 22 takes. I got a really bad block and it became infuriating. But everybody felt for me because they know what it's like.'

Helen Baxendale, who plays Rachel, certainly knows what it's like. Called upon in the final episode to make a call on her mobile phone, she managed to actually ring somebody up. The out-takes reel sees her and Nesbitt clutching onto each other with tears pouring down their faces as they realize what she's done. 'It was awful,' she confides in the make-up van, 'I have no idea who it was, but they must have thought I was mad. I'm going to have some time off now, which is probably just as well.'

COLD FEET
WEDNESDAYS FROM 27TH, 10.00PM

Lloyd's outer limits

Lloyd Nebulon, a space station-bound adolescent alien, may be anything but 'normal'. But, as his creators tell Hilary Bonner, his teen angst is universal

SET ON a futuristic space station, Disney's latest zany cartoon features Lloyd, a 13-year-old alien hero, who is bright green, bald and has a two-headed girlfriend. But the creators of Lloyd in Space say it's really just a school days romp. Paul Germain and Joe Ansolabehere, who produced and wrote the hit animated series Rugrats and Recess, claim their latest show is just a natural progression, which focuses on the next stage of growing up.

'Rugrats is about what it is like to be a baby discovering the world for the first time, not knowing what is going on and struggling to come to some kind of understanding,' says Joe. 'The nine-year-old kids in Recess have some understanding, but they're finding that it's not so easy to get along - it's a tough world. They want to know how to survive it, and they find the answer is to be helped by your friends. In this new show, Lloyd is 13 and he's beginning to feel confined, so he wants to break out and discover the world. He wants to break away from his mum, and yet he doesn't quite. He gets into trouble and then has to get out of it.'

Lloyd's home is the space station Intrepid, a gleaming state-of-the-art triumph of the late 1960s that has slumped into slightly shabby disrepair and is now known as Intrepid Bill.

Says Joe: 'We've filled it with junky stuff from the 1960s, like a vinyl roof, that sort of thing. The Intrepid has become a bit like a run-down town in Middle America - it's gone very suburban.'

The show is something of a spoof on serious science fiction.

'We like to either take something fantastical and ground it, or take something very grounded and blow it up a bit,' Joe explains. 'We've really been able to let our imaginations go. This is junior high school, but in space, so the brainy guy at school becomes just a brain with legs, and the big dumb one is just a giant amorphous blob.'

Lloyd himself may be an alien, but behind his green skin he's just a typical tortured teenager.

'All kids of that age want to explode a little and they can't because they're too little and don't have any powers, but this kid is stuck in a tin can that he can't get out of,' Joe continues. 'He doesn't have a father really - his parents are divorced - so he looks to all sorts of other people to be a father figure. His best friend is really a computer and he has a grandfather who appears to him as a hologram, because he lives on a retirement planet, and never fails to give Lloyd really bad advice.'

'Then we thought about the latest Star Trek series which has a female commander and we thought, what if that woman is Lloyd's mother? He also has a sister who is psychic and can read his mind. Add that to a mother who is the commander of the space station where he lives and it's every kid's nightmare really.'

Lloyd is voiced by young actor Courtland Mead, the 14-year-old veteran of 17 Hollywood movies, who is also the voice of Gus in Recess.

Courtland, who made his film debut when he was just five years old starring in Only You alongside Helen Hunt, also regards the alien spaceboy as being at heart very like Earthbound kids of his age.

'I know I am a bit like Lloyd, even though he's an alien,' says Courtland. 'I'm not green or bald though! But I'm kind of shy with girls like he is - I think most kids are at my age, although I do have a girlfriend at the moment. So does Lloyd, but, of course, his has two heads. One is a nasty head and the other is a nice head, which makes things a bit difficult for him.'

That is just what this new show is all about, reckon both Joe Ansolabehere and Paul Germain.

'When you discover this girl has two heads that seems just crazy,' says Paul. 'But what develops is actually just a typical high school dating story.'

Bright lights Brit city

In a town where anything goes, Lawrie Masterson meets the expats offering a British oasis amid the gambling capital of America

AS ARSENAL score in the London derby with Tottenham Hotspur, the roar echoes around the bars of a thousand British pubs where fans have gathered to watch the match on TV over a pint of bitter and steak and kidney pie with chips.

It is no different at the Crown & Anchor. Fists are thrust into the air as the Gunners go one up and the patrons join in the singing with the fans at Highbury.

Yet some things here are, indeed, different. For a start, it's just after midday and outside in the Crown & Anchor beer garden it is about 80 degrees ... in March. The crowd in the Crown & Anchor are wearing T-shirts and shorts, rather than their woolly team scarves.

This particular pub is a long way from Highbury – more than 5000 miles, in fact, bang in the middle of the Nevada desert. It is a Spanish-style building that does not look incongruous among the Mexican restaurants and pizza joints on East Tropicana Avenue in Las Vegas, but inside it's a tiny corner of the UK.

It is a place to which Las Vegas locals, British expatriates and visitors to the gambling capital of America flock every day, and an obvious focal point for this summer's six-part series

Las Vegas Uncovered, on Sky One.

On the day of Cable Guide's visit, Canterbury-born Dara Azizi sits in one corner of the Crown & Anchor bar, his eyes glued to a replay of an action-packed Liverpool v Manchester

United game played earlier that morning, Las Vegas time.

As a treat for his 33rd birthday, Azizi and his American wife, Kelly, drove all night from their home in Arizona, about 315 miles, to watch the game live. They had discovered the pub on the internet.

'This is just wonderful,' says lifelong Liverpool fan Azizi, as he savours a pint and the Merseyside team's 2-0 victory.

'Just hearing the crowd singing is superb.'

That night, James Smith from Durham sits with seven mates in the pub restaurant celebrating his forthcoming wedding.

They have all made the long trip to Las Vegas especially for the stag night 'because we can'.

With two direct flights a week from London to Las Vegas, the rapidly growing desert city of some 2.5 million people has become even more of a magnet for Britons than in the past.

'Las Vegas has always been very popular with British people, but I think it's even more so now,' Crown & Anchor owner Ron Schultz says, as he takes a break in the restaurant. 'It's very easy to fly in for a few days, then continue to travel throughout the western United States.'

A 43-year-old native of San Diego, Schultz first became attracted to the atmosphere of British pubs when he was a student in Los Angeles and a regular at Ye Olde King's Head in Santa Monica.

After going into real estate and moving to Las Vegas, he opened his first British-themed bar, the British Bulldog, with an English expatriate partner 12 years ago. He has since sold that, plus a second bar called Mad Dogs & Englishmen, and he opened the Crown & Anchor six years ago.

'Each one has been phenomenally successful,' Schultz says. 'We just get crowds of people and I think no matter where you are in the world, it's just a nice environment to spend time. I travel a lot and I like to go to the rest of Europe as well as Britain and, in fact, everywhere I go there are British pubs and they're all popular.'

Schultz says he tries to remain in the background, allowing his two British managers, June LeMay and Mark McGary, to run the Crown & Anchor.

LeMay is a slim, blonde woman in a grey skirt and sweater who says she won't reveal her age because it is the frequent subject of bar bets.

She arrived in America from Hull, Yorkshire, 20 years ago to work as a nanny in Malibu. After she married her American husband and gave birth to Lucas, 14, and Tara, 11, they moved to Las Vegas. She has been with the Crown & Anchor since it opened.

'No, but I love it,' she says when asked whether she ever expected to be working in a fragment of Britain in a town best known for the spectacular casinos which line nearby Las Vegas Boulevard, better known as the Strip. 'If I weren't here I'd be totally homesick. Our fish and chips are better than Britain's ... well, they're not as good as Hull's, but we have good fish and chips and people know about them.'

'They speak with American accents, but they all love their bangers and mash'

Asked whether she considers it ironic that the Crown & Anchor is owned by an American, she replies: 'Yeah, he's had to learn how we are. Everything is different about us - what we eat, our sense of humour - but he has a better understanding of it now. He has no choice!'

McGary, 33, is a solidly built, dark-haired former chef of the Allesley Hotel in Coventry, who came to America on a 90-day visitor's visa 12 years ago.

'I came to Vegas because I liked to gamble anyway, then I fell in love with the sun and that was it,' he says. Also married to an American, he has three children, Evan, ten, Nicholas, five, and Laura, four.

'They speak with American accents, but they all love their bangers and mash and drink their tea,' he says.

McGary's main task at the Crown & Anchor is to keep up a steady diet of major sports events live via satellite. They attract crowds that are occasionally too big for the pub to accommodate.

'For the England v Scotland game last year we had to rent another hotel,' he says. 'It was the same time as [Lennox] Lewis was fighting [Evander] Holyfield and about 6000 Lewis fans came in to Vegas on four-day packages, so we rented eight screens and a satellite on a truck and did it at the Tropicana.'

'We had 2100 people. The Tropicana said it was the most beer and food they'd ever sold in a two-hour stint.'

Spotlight on Cameron Diaz

Cameron Diaz's off-kilter beauty lends itself well to the quirky roles that actors less concerned about their image would shy away from. She has played shrill and unsympathetic brides-to-be in the Julia Roberts hit My Best Friend's Wedding and the dark moral dilemma comedy Very Bad Things, and was an unrecognizably dowdy woman with doubts about her gender in the wildly original Being John Malkovich. She demonstrated a natural flair for comedy in those films, as well as in the outrageous There's Something About Mary. But she flexes her dramatic muscles in Any Given Sunday this month, and acquits herself well alongside acting heavyweight Al Pacino.

Ang's direct approach

KIM NEWMAN ON ...
ANG LEE

Admirers of Ang Lee's arthouse kung fu epic Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon may want to acquaint themselves with the premiere of his previous film, the Civil War drama Ride with the Devil

YOU'D SWEAR that Ang Lee was several different directors with as many nationalities if you didn't know any better. How else could one person start out with three films about the experience of Asian-Americans (Pushing Hands, The Wedding Banquet, Eat Drink Man Woman), and go through a pair of quality literary adaptations (Sense and Sensibility, The Ice Storm) to become a reinventer of action genres with the Western Ride with the Devil and the kung fu epic Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon? The only consistency seems to be that Ang Lee films rack up lots of Oscar nominations,

Ang time: Ride with the Devil director Ang Lee in between takes often in the acting, Best Adapted Screenplay and Best Foreign Language Film categories. He seems unlikely to desert his arthouse constituency, even while considering a sequel to Crouching Tiger, but he is actually an old-style studio-type director, versatile in subject matter, though consistent in technique and character.

It's ironic that his most obviously commercial movie, the Western Ride with the Devil, was the only one not to make an immediate connection with an audience, though it may well be a picture that now, post-Crouching Tiger, is ripe for rediscovery as it makes its Cable TV bow.

An entry in the sub-subgenre of guerrilla Civil War Westerns set in Kansas or Missouri, as epitomized by Clint Eastwood's The Outlaw Josey Wales, Ride is almost a literalization of that brother-against-brother view of the War, and inevitably climaxes with the often-dramatized attack on the undefended town of Lawrence, Kansas, by Confederate guerrilla William Clarke Quantrill.

The set-up is that Jake Roedel (Tobey Maguire), son of a Union-sympathizing German immigrant, winds up on the run with Jack Bull Chiles (Skeet Ulrich), son of a plantation owner murdered by Jayhawkers, the vicious Union guerrillas.

The pair join up with a band of Bushwhackers, the Confederate irregulars, and carry out a war of skirmish against the Jayhawkers, along with the high-born George Clyde (Simon Baker) and his ex-slave friend Daniel Holt (Jeffrey Wright). The quartet have to hole up for a long winter, during which time Jack begins a relationship with young widow Sue Lee (Jewel) and Jake learns a little about Holt.

The strongest suspense tactic is that the foreign Jake (they call him 'Dutchy') and the black Holt are more and more likely to be killed by their own comrades as defeat after defeat makes them bitter.

The Jesse James-like Pitt Mackeson (Jonathan Rhys-Meyers) becomes especially hostile, and the surviving heroes come to question just why they are so committed to a cause that despises them.

It doesn't offer easy answers and mercifully refrains from speechifying about injustices or changes of heart. Adapted from Daniel Woodrell's novel Woe to Live On, the script (by Lee's usual associate James Schamus) has an elaborate 19th-century feel, and Lee certainly doesn't skimp on the action, staging skirmishes, all-out battles and raids with flair, and always showing how they affect his characters.

TOBY AMIES

What's your favourite movie and why?

The Loved One (1965), from Evelyn Waugh's book, directed by Tony Richardson. It's a black comedy about funerals, love and the English in America, featuring John Gielgud, Liberace, Rod Steiger, Robert Morley, Jonathan Winters, James Coburn and Roddy McDowall. It looks great and has immaculate performances.

Who's your favourite movie actor?

Jim Broadbent, who I think should be the next James Bond. He is brilliant in Bullets Over Broadway and in Mike Leigh's Topsy-Turvy.

Do you have a favourite movie quote?

'Groovy,' as delivered by Ash [played by Bruce Campbell] in Evil Dead II, which in its place in the film says a lot in very few words.

What's your first movie memory?

Seeing Bugsy Malone. I thought it was the best - the tunes, custard pie machine guns and girls my age made up to look foxy. I remember being quite taken with Jodie Foster.

When did you last cry at a movie?

Nora Ephron pushes all my sissy buttons - the more shameful and embarrassing her situation, the easier I wet my cheeks.

What's your favourite comedy?

I'm a big fan of Dumb and Dumber for the sophisticated stuff, and then the original Bedazzled (1967) for the belly laughs.

You can see Toby Amies presenting Filmspotting on FilmFour, Fridays, 7.30pm

Clash of the titans

The Lion king

Selection to the Lions squad is a career high for Scott Murray, and nothing short of a roaring success will do. Interview: Simon Johnson

SCOTT MURRAY has set his Lions team-mates a target of eclipsing their South African tour record in 1997 by returning from Australia in July unbeaten.

The Scottish lock forward was not in the Lions squad that came away from South Africa with a 2-1 series win and just one defeat during the trip four years ago.

But Murray is determined to better that record in Australia, which includes three Test matches against the world champions and seven games against provincial opponents, although he admits it is a very difficult proposition.

He says: 'Australia are the world champions so it will be a really tough task to beat them on their own soil.'

'But we are aiming to go there and stay unbeaten. You are always looking to do better than the last time, so all the players want to improve on the results of the South African tour.'

He continues: 'To beat Australia, we must outmuscle and outpace them. We all believe we can do it, but make no mistake it will be a great contest.'

Murray will be trying to provide the Lions with vital balls from their throw-ins at the line-out, while also trying to steal possession from Australia.

He got the better of opposite number and Australia captain John Eales doing just that when playing for Scotland last year, but Murray is aware he is up against the best player in the world at his position.

Murray adds: 'I think I am very good at competing against the opposition's line-outs, so hopefully I can steal a few against the head, as it were.'

'The line-out battle will be very important, especially as we are up against John Eales, who is probably the best second row in the world.'

The Saracens lock believes the strong English presence in the squad is merited after they beat Australia in the autumn.

'They know what to do to beat them, which explains why there are so many of them on the tour. The most important thing is that we win the Test series — then it doesn't matter how many Englishmen there are. It is all about picking the best team.'

'It was awesome for me to get selected — it is the highest accolade over here. This is the pinnacle of my career.'

And it will prove even more of a landmark for Murray if he returns, as intended, from Australia in July with an unbeaten Lions squad.

Red hot: the Lions show off their official team shirt

We meet again

The Wallabies have a score to settle during the Lions Tour, says former Australian fly-half Michael Lynagh. Interview: Simon Johnson

MICHAEL LYNAGH has warned the Lions they will face an Australian team determined to prove a point when they play a three-Test series Down Under.

The former Australian international, who was on the wrong end of a 2-1 series defeat when the Lions last toured in 1989, believes the Wallabies are still smarting from defeat by England last autumn.

Half of the squad going out this summer are English, and many were involved in the dramatic 22-19 victory over the Australians that took place at Twickenham last November.

And Lynagh insists the reigning world champions will want to re-establish their position as the undisputed kings of international rugby. Lynagh says: 'This is a new test for the team, and the guys who played against England recently will want to prove a point.'

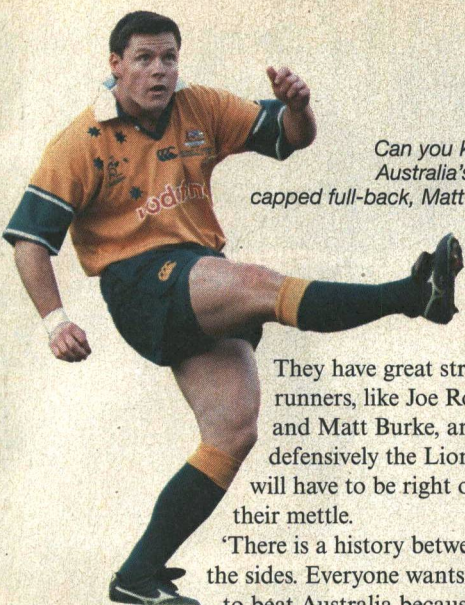

'Australia are a very strong outfit at the moment with not many weaknesses.'

Run with it: Scott Murray charges past the opposition with the same force he'll adopt against Australia

Can you kick it?
Australia's most capped full-back, Matt Burke

They have great strong runners, like Joe Roff and Matt Burke, and defensively the Lions will have to be right on their mettle.

'There is a history between the sides. Everyone wants to beat Australia because they are the world champions and this will be no different. It is the best of the northern hemisphere against Australia.

'I was involved in the 1989 team and it was viewed then as a once-in-a-lifetime chance, and I have a feeling that the guys playing in this series will no doubt feel the same way.'

But Lynagh, who is now a Sky Sports pundit, admits the Lions have a very strong squad and believes injuries to just a couple of Australia's key players could tip the balance.

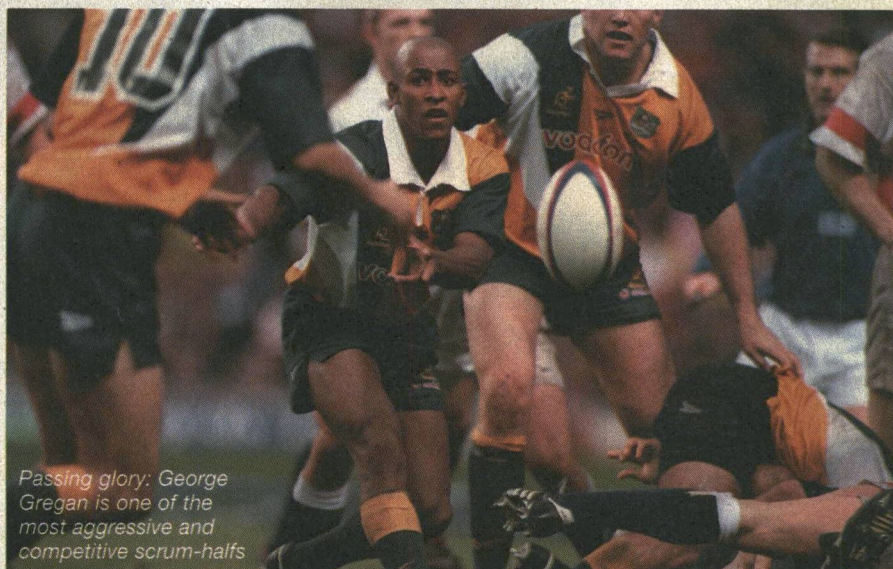

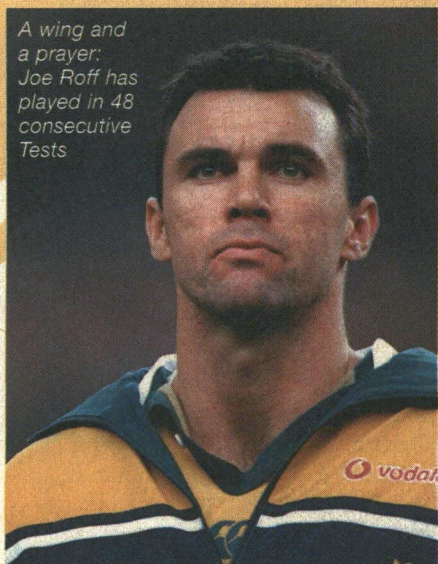

He adds: 'The Lions have class players in every position, with equally talented players ready to step in. Injuries will be a factor and it is very important to have a strong squad.'

'I think the tour will be very close, and being Australian I have to tip them, but injuries to the Aussie team could play a big role.'

'If Steve Larkham is injured, for example, the balance tips to the Lions, because there isn't anyone of that class who has played that long in the Australian team.'

'The Australians' problem at present, and historically, is that we just don't have that much depth at international level.'

A wing and a prayer:
Joe Roff has played in 48 consecutive Tests

Passing glory: George Gregan is one of the most aggressive and competitive scrum-halves

Let the games begin

With their mighty half-backs, Larkham and Gregan, fighting fit, Australia are well-equipped to tame the Lions, writes Mark Hawthorne

OVER 10,000 Lions fans are expected to head Down Under for the rugby this summer, exceeding the number that travelled from the UK to the Olympic Games in Sydney last year.

But it's not the sun and sand that have attracted record numbers of tourists. The very real chance of seeing the Wallabies beaten in a Lions series, as happened in Australia in 1989, is a spectacle many ardent Lions supporters would dearly love to witness first hand.

Much of the hope and hype generated by the 37-man Lions squad - hailed as one of the best to leave this nation's shores - has resulted from England's stunning last-minute victory over Australia at Twickenham last autumn. But in all the fuss surrounding that triumph, one vital fact has been overlooked - two names missing from Australia's team-sheet that afternoon in November will have a major impact on the Lions' chances.

George Gregan and Steve Larkham form the best half-back combination in world rugby. The clash between Larkham and England's gifted Jonny Wilkinson at fly-half is one of the most eagerly awaited of the tour, but Britain's chances of victory will depend on their ability to stop 28-year-old Gregan from marshalling Australia's attack.

Born in Lusaka, Zambia, Australia's George Gregan has been hailed as the premier scrum-half in world rugby.

Under the coaching of Rod Macqueen, Australia have claimed their second World Cup trophy, defeated the All Blacks in three successive Bledisloe Cup series and won their first Tri-Nations trophy. Gregan has been a major factor in that success.

'We're fortunate to have them back,' Macqueen says. 'We didn't have either George or Steve in the autumn, but with them both fit we'll be far more competitive.'

Injury forced both Gregan and Larkham to miss Australia's autumn tour, but in February the pair, who both play for the ACT Brumbies, returned to the Super 12 competition after the longest break of their careers.

After missing Tests against England, Scotland and Wales, Gregan is eager for the international action to begin. He says:

'Right now I'm still focusing on the Brumbies, all the other stuff takes care of itself, but the Lions tour is in my mind.'

'They're a well-prepared and talented team, but we will be ready for them.'

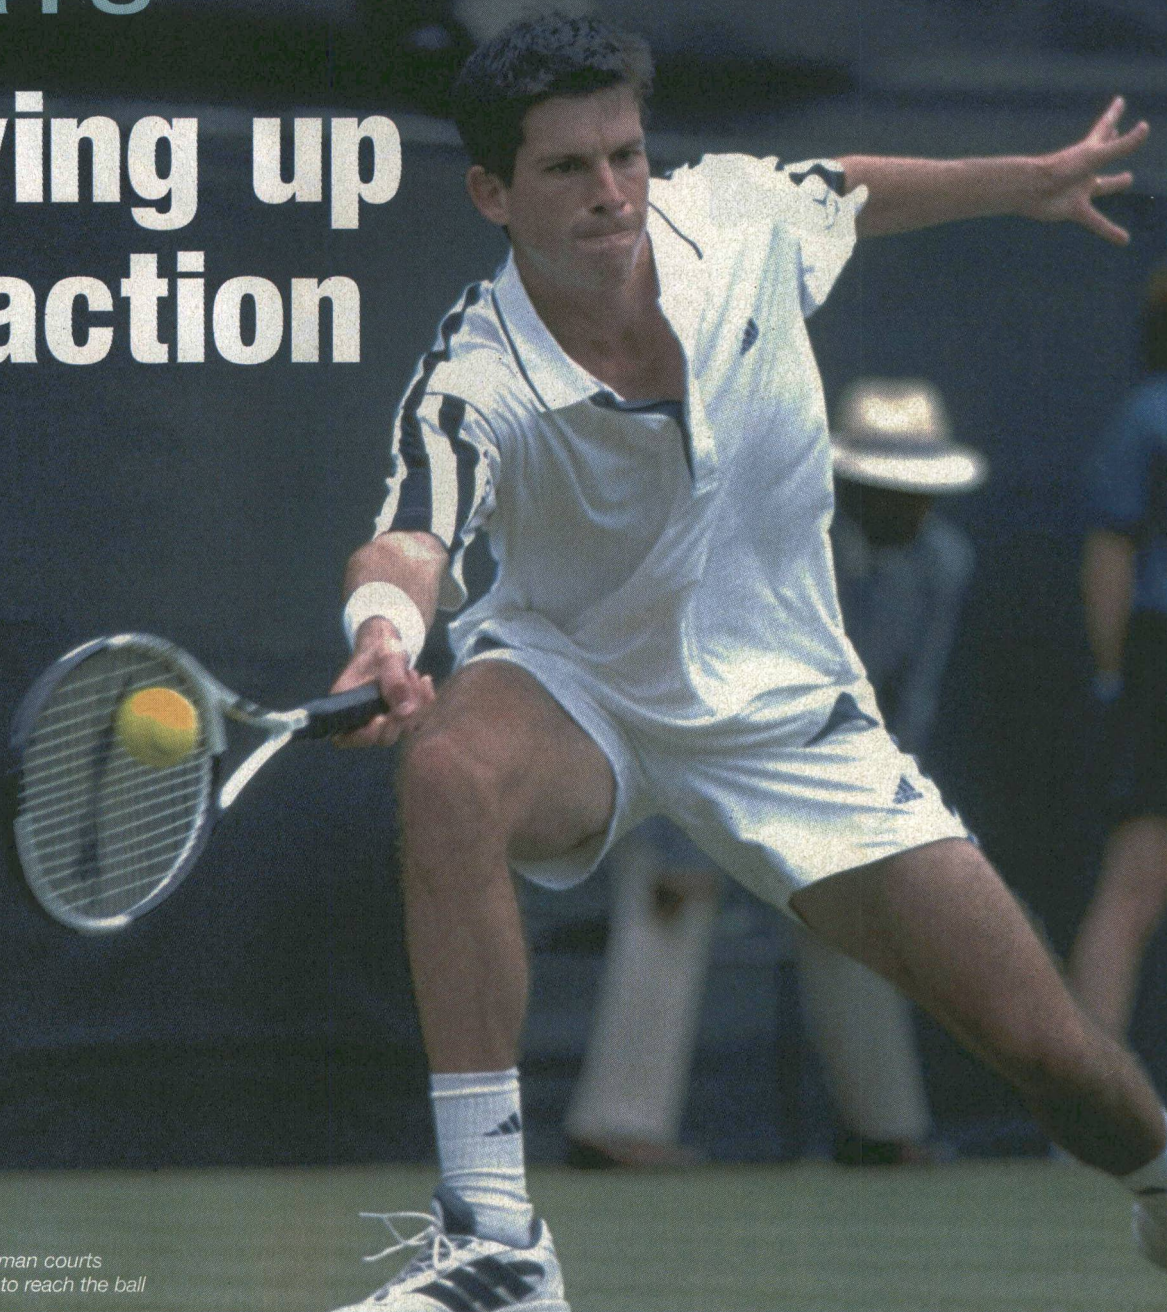

Jonny Wilkinson, just 21, is a record points scorer

Serving up the action

Playing at full stretch: Tim Henman courts attention with his determination to reach the ball

Tim's grass arena

With Britain's tennis season set to heat up, Ross Biddiscombe assesses which of our hopefuls might have the advantage

Service with a smile: Greg Rusedski

BRITAIN'S top two tennis stars, Tim Henman and Greg Rusedski, travel the world in search of titles, but both would probably hand back a few trophies if it guaranteed a win in front of home fans at the Stella Artois Championships. They both live within a short tube ride of London's Queen's Club and have practised there endlessly, but neither has yet threatened to triumph at the prestigious event.

Of the two, Rusedski has been closest with a semi-final appearance in 1997, where he lost an epic third-set tie-break to Goran Ivanisevic 18-16. The Stella was also the scene of Rusedski's worst injury as a pro when he turned an ankle on court in 1998 and was out of the sport for two months.

However, Henman has never been to the final stages and last year he lost in the second round, despite a huge desire to win the tournament and hit top form for Wimbledon.

Both Henman and Rusedski pride themselves on the sort of big serving that is especially crucial to modern day grass court tennis, and they have maintained that edge in the early part of the 2001 season. Henman won impressively in Copenhagen in February, while Rusedski has revived memories of the form that took him to the US Open final in 1997, thanks to a new regime that has freed him from suffering niggling injuries.

Perhaps this year is Henman's turn to shine at the Stella despite a big question mark over his game – whether he can find a coach to replace long-time friend and guide David Felgate. They parted company this spring, but Henman is relaxed about a replacement. 'If I don't have a new coach before the summer, then so be it,' was his post-Felgate attitude.

With the Stella in mind, one of Henman's main concerns is changing his style from the springtime clay court season. 'The grass court season is not a long one, but at least it's much easier going from clay to grass than the other way around,' he says. And of his main opponents, last year's Stella champion, Australian Lleyton Hewitt, is one of the biggest dangers. 'He's more of an unorthodox grass court player, serving and staying back,' says Henman, who himself relies on a classic serve-and-volley game.

The unique ambience at the Queen's Club is something all the players – particularly the British ones – can relish, even though the crowds may enjoy themselves a little too much. 'It's a great atmosphere at Stella, although later in the evening crowds are slightly Pimms-affected!' admits Henman, who will be hoping to give them even more reason to top up those glasses this year.

Childs' play

Tipped to follow in Henman and Rusedski's footsteps, new British player Lee Childs is one to watch

THE LONG search for another top British player in the men's game to follow in the footsteps of Henman and Rusedski may finally be over. Cable viewers should get a chance to see the 18-year-old Lee Childs in action during the Stella Artois Championships.

This Somerset lad won the junior event at the Stella only last year and then made an impressive Davis Cup debut this April. 'Playing in the Davis Cup against Portugal was a better feeling than anything I could have expected,' he remembers. 'I was very nervous to start with because I'd never played in front of as many as 6000 people before.'

The support seemed to inspire Childs, who won his match in straight sets, even blasting a 129mph serve past his opponent – that's about 20mph short of Rusedski's world best.

'Grass courts and fast indoor courts will probably always be my favourite surface because my serve is strong, and if I can get a wild card at the Stella then I'll just give it my best shot,' he says.

Childs' ATP world ranking of 359 is far better than that achieved by Henman or Rusedski at the same age – the best they could manage was 771 and 603 respectively.

Henman certainly appreciates Childs: 'Having Lee is a step in the right direction, but we're still only talking about one or two players, when British tennis needs 11 or 12.'

As Eastbourne welcomes its women's championships, we take a look at who is going to be courting the action

THE EASTBOURNE International Championships have been one of the world's premier grass court tournaments for 25 years and the champions roll of honour is an outstanding list of the best ever, from Martina Navratilova (11 times a singles winner, and six times a doubles winner) to Tracy Austin, Monica Seles and Jana Novotna.

Nowadays the women's game is overtaking the men's in terms of public interest, and that's mostly thanks to a whole host of exciting and glamorous, talented youngsters who have emerged over the last few years.

The Eastbourne championships, sponsored this year by Britannic Asset Management, will welcome a fair number of top players, including many of the highly successful French contingent of stars, led by Amélie Mauresmo and another former champion, Nathalie Tauziat. There will also be Russia's Anna Kournikova (pictured right), who is perhaps the best-known of today's women players because of her blonde locks and general good looks.

One person who will not be there, however, is last year's champion, another product of the French tennis academy, Julie Halard-Decugis, who has retired. In the final, she beat Belgium's Dominique Van Roost, who had become favourite for the title after upsetting Lindsay Davenport in the quarter-finals.

Food for Thorpe: after taking a winter off, Thorpe feels renewed

AFTER a much longed-for cricketing revival spanning 12 months, which included consecutive series victories over South Africa, the West Indies, Pakistan and Sri Lanka, England's cricketers have the chance to regain the Ashes from Australia for the first time in 14 years.

But before the Ashes series gets under way, England must face both Pakistan and Australia in the NatWest one-day series, and there is more at stake than a confidence boost on the eve of the Tests.

With the next World Cup in South Africa just two years away, many believe as much hinges on England's one-day form this summer as the team's performances in the two Test series. As cricket competes with football for sponsorship and the attentions of young players, World Cup success is seen as being on a par with regaining the Ashes.

In the wake of disastrous one-day performances in Sri Lanka, England coach Duncan Fletcher has called for an increase in the number of one-day internationals the team play in order to prepare them for a serious challenge at the 2003 World Cup. England will also play in two day-night matches, somewhat of a revolution for this country, but the norm for most other cricketing nations.

England's long-term World Cup preparation begins with the NatWest series this month, and Graham Thorpe, who led England in Sri Lanka, says some major changes in the way the team play will be in place in time for the triangular series.

'We have a long way to go in the one-day game and we are at a crossroads at the

As England awaits the chance to bring home the Ashes, Graham Thorpe and Nasser Hussain talk to Mark Hawthorne about having to face the NatWest one-day series first moment,' Thorpe says. 'There is a good deal of work to do to make this team an efficient unit. When the wheels start coming off when we bat, we don't have enough experience to dig ourselves out of trouble.'

His captain, Nasser Hussain, agrees: 'We definitely have it in us to lift our one-day performances, but our senior players will have to hold the reins, while we have some exciting youngsters who can belt the ball quite well and take chances when they need to.'

Hussain continues: 'There has been no secret formula to our turnaround. Astute planning, determination and a fierce pride in representing one's country have brought us our recent achievements. Every minute detail has been discussed. Each member has contributed his bit, but we have to carry it on this summer to show that all the hard work has not gone to waste.'

Identifying the next generation of one-day players will be critical this summer, with stalwarts Alec Stewart, Michael Atherton and Graeme Hick all unlikely to make it to South Africa. Finding those players soon will be vital, given the talent and firepower that Pakistan and Australia boast.

Thorpe says: 'We have had a look at the way we play, the strategies we employ and the squad. Age is one problem. Finding the youngsters available who have the brains and skill for this game is another.'

The Australian side, with Steve and Mark Waugh, Ricky Ponting, Michael Bevan and Adam Gilchrist, has one of the best batting orders the one-day game has seen.

Thorpe, though, is more concerned with maintaining his brilliant winter form and trying not to burn out before the Ashes. He has spoken many times of his 'extra drive and purpose', after taking a winter off during last year's England tour to South Africa and says he looks forward to being 'fresh for the summer'.

'When I made the decision to take the winter off I knew I was gambling with my career. But to me the risk was worth it,' Thorpe says. 'Psychologically and physically, I could go so far, but no further. The buzz was missing from my game and I can see the same thing happening to some of my colleagues.'

Given Thorpe's comeback, they are words England's selectors should heed.

Technicolor dreams of Jack Cardiff

Veteran cinematographer Jack Cardiff has been behind the lens on many classic movies. As two examples of his work air on Carlton Cinema, Graham Oliver spoke to the double Oscar-winner

BLACK NARCISSUS and Conan the Destroyer. You wouldn't think these two movies actually had a great deal in common: the former – a subtly affecting 1940s drama detailing the emotional turmoil of a group of nuns in the Himalayas – is rightly regarded as a masterpiece of British cinema; the latter is a Hollywood sword-and-sorcery adventure starring Arnold Schwarzenegger. But the films share an undeniable visual artistry, and that's because both were shot by Jack Cardiff, the most respected and imaginative cameraman in the industry.

The Yarmouth-born Cardiff, now a sprightly 86 years old, has notched up cinematographer credits on 70 films and has directed 13 features, including the DH Lawrence adaptation Sons and Lovers.

His most celebrated work, however, was for the visionary film-making team of British director Michael Powell and his Hungarian-born writing and producing partner Emeric Pressburger, for whom he manned the camera on three enduring classics: A Matter of Life and Death (1946), the aforementioned Black Narcissus (1947) and The Red Shoes (1948).

Cardiff has always been restlessly creative by nature, always challenging accepted ideas about cinematography and movie-making. And in Powell he found a kindred spirit. Cardiff says: 'He was constantly attacking everything that was normal. I did a lot of things that cameramen weren't supposed to do. And that was Michael's entire way of working, so we got on famously.'

A great example of Cardiff's resourceful inventiveness resulted in a simple but effective moment early on in the much-loved fantasy A Matter of Life and Death. An RAF pilot, played by David Niven, has abandoned his crippled aircraft as it hurtled to the ground. He is about to find himself on a beautiful beach and believes he has died and gone to heaven. Cardiff explains how he approached the opening shot of the sandy idyll: 'Just as we were about to shoot it Michael said, "It says in the script fade-in, which is a bit corny. I wish we could think of something different." I said, "Michael, look through the camera," and as he did so I went round the front and breathed on the lens. It took about four seconds for this misty condensation to disappear and reveal the scene and Michael loved it.'

Black Narcissus, starring Deborah Kerr, and The Red Shoes, starring ballerina-turned-actress Moira Shearer, are among the most poetic adventures in colour ever committed to celluloid. Cardiff's vibrant, dreamlike experiments on the haunting ballet tale were astonishing, and his expressive photography on Black Narcissus helped convince audiences they were watching a story unfold against the epic backdrop of the Himalayas, rather than a cleverly dressed set at Pinewood Studios. Cardiff won a richly deserved Oscar for his astonishing efforts on that film. Despite being nominated a further three times, he had to wait 53 years to double his Oscar haul. At this year's ceremony he became the first cameraman in Academy history to win an Honorary Oscar, and as he accepted the statuette amid rapturous applause, there wasn't a happier, prouder man in the world.

But surely there was a sense of sweet revenge, too. For, back in 1949, Academy politics had denied Cardiff a nomination for his sterling cinematography on The Red Shoes. 'That whole affair was very sad,' he sighs. 'At that time, everyone said, "You're definitely going to get the Oscar for this." I wasn't even nominated. The reason was the camera society decided that as I'd won it the year before, it would be putting American cameramen in a bad light if an Englishman won the Oscar two years running. So this year you could say I made a bit of an entrance through the back door!'

Win! The Red Shoes Collector's Edition DVDs and Videos

This tragic and romantic ballet tale rates among the finest achievements of celebrated film-making team Powell and Pressburger, and their master cinematographer Jack Cardiff. Now this enduring classic can be enjoyed again and again on video and DVD.

To win one of five videos or three DVDs of The Red Shoes, simply answer this question:

Name the ballerina and actress who played Vicky Page in the film.

Log on to www.cableguide.co.uk to enter.

Or send your answer on a postcard, with name and address, to Cable Guide/Red Shoes competition, PO Box 2176, London W1A 5TW. The first eight correct entries drawn at random will win. Closing date 30 June 2001. Please specify a video or DVD preference. Full Cable Guide rules on page 53.

Conan the Destroyer, Carlton Cinema, Friday 8th, 11.00pm
(Black Narcissus airs on Carlton Cinema, Wednesday 13th, 7.00pm)

GODS AND MONSTERS

FilmFour 8.00pm

This Oscar-winning biopic follows the story of legendary director James (Frankenstein) Whale (an entertaining Ian McKellen), who was outwardly homosexual in Hollywood when it was very much a taboo. He falls in love with his gardener (Brendan Fraser), an ex-marine.

RIDE WITH THE DEVIL

Sky Premier 8.00pm
Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon director Ang Lee presents the American Civil War from the perspective of the Confederate bushwhackers - brutal guerrillas fighting alongside the Southern forces. Skeet Ulrich and Tobey Maguire play brothers-in-arms in this thoughtful drama.

GENERAL

BIOGRAPHY

The History Channel 7.00pm
A 1950s film icon, Montgomery Clift was publicly a heart-throb who concealed a troubled private life and died tragically prematurely at 45. His finest moments on film, home movies and interviews are gathered here to reveal the anguish of one of Hollywood's greatest actors.

|            | LIVE INTERNATIONAL FOOTBALL: REPUBLIC OF IRELAND V PORTUGALSKY SPORTS 2 2.00PMThe Republic of Ireland play host to Portugal in a crucial World Cup 2002 qualifier at Lansdowne Road, Dublin. Although the Irish enter the match as Group Two leaders, this tie will be no easy task as the Portuguese showed what they can achieve by reaching the semi-final of Euro 2000. The two teams' last meeting in Lisbon last October ended in a 1-1 draw. Today, Republic manager Mick McCarthy needs players like Mark Kennedy (left in picture) to give his all if his team are to remain top of the table. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |

THE ABYSS

Sky Cinema 8.00pm

Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio and Ed Harris lead a team of divers investigating a missing American nuclear submarine, thought to have been attacked by the Russians. Once beneath the surface, however, they discover something much more sinister – they are not alone.

GENERAL

THE SIMPSONS

Sky One 6.30pm

A brand new episode of Matt Groening's animated satire lampooning contemporary American society. When Lisa is bullied by a new girl at school, she decides to conduct a scientific experiment in bullying, which leads to some ground-breaking results.

It is still not plain sailing for the five lucky finalist band members Jacob, Ashley, Ikaika, Mark and Christian. Jacob wrestles with a future with the band and his dedication to God, and Ikaika still feels torn between his career and his girlfriend in Hawaii. It remains to be seen how O-Town compare to the talents of the UK's Hear'Say. |

FORD GOLF USA: US WOMEN'S OPEN SKY SPORTS 2 11.00PM

The final day of the US Women's Open sees the world's top women golfers battling it out for the coveted $2.75m title. Last year it was the Australian Karrie Webb (pictured) who took the honours at the Merit Club, finishing a comfortable five shots ahead of Christie Kerr and Meg Mallon. This year the contest returns to the Pine Needles Lodge and Golf Club, where major contender Annika Sorenstam of Sweden won the title in 1996. The tournament, which began 56 years ago is the longest-running event of the LPGA Tour.

LIVE TEST CRICKET: ENGLAND V PAKISTAN - SECOND TEST SKY SPORTS 1 10.30AM, 1.30PM

Live action from Old Trafford, Manchester, of the fourth day of the second Test between England and Pakistan. This match will present a difficult challenge for Nasser Hussain's men in the face of some of the world's best spin bowlers. It certainly won't be easy for the home team to follow their winter tour triumph in Pakistan and run rates will depend heavily on the fitness of mainstays in the batting line-up such as Michael Vaughan (left in picture) - who plays his domestic cricket for Yorkshire.

EURO SENIORS GOLF: DE VERE PGA SENIORS CHAMPIONSHIP SKY SPORTS 2 6.00PM, 9.30PM, 3.30AM

The European Seniors Tour arrives in the UK for the De Vere PGA Seniors Championship held at De Vere Carden Park in Cheshire. A strong field is expected to compete for the lion's share of the £200,000 prize fund, including Brazilian Priscillo Diniz (pictured) - a former lawyer from São Paulo - who won the Royal Westmoreland Barbados Open, the first tournament of the season on the Tour in March. Last year's winner, John Grace, should also be in contention at this event which began back in 1957.

Don't look down
it might increase your heart rate.

The Discovery Channel Adventure Race - one of the world's most challenging races. Over 364 kilometers of wild and hostile terrain, participants will push their bodies to the very limits.

With each contestant's heart rate, body temperature, breath rate, blood oxygen and effects of sleep deprivation closely monitored, you'll see just how gruelling it is.

FOOTBALL: ROAD TO WORLD CUP 2002 BRITISH EUROSPORT 9.45PM

All of the top international action and details of four World Cup 2002 qualifiers as the best teams in Europe bid to qualify for next year's finals in Korea and Japan. Wales will be looking to the talent of Manchester United's Ryan Giggs (pictured, right) to fall back on as they travel to take on Ukraine in their Group Five clash. Meanwhile, Germany's inspirational midfielder Michael Ballack (pictured, left) will be hoping to shine in a table-topping German side that takes on struggling Albania in England's Group Nine.

THE EAGLE of GLORY

INITIAL RING

Introducing a prestigious new design... exclusively from Brooks & Bentley

The magnificent golden eagle has long represented the ultimate symbol of strength and power, inspiring nations all over the world with its almighty reputation as the king of birds. And now, in tribute to this spectacular predator, the jewellers of Brooks & Bentley are proud to announce The Eagle of Glory Initial Ring, a dynamic new jewellery masterpiece that captures the spirit of the wild with unrivalled passion.

Expertly hand-crafted within the gleaming excellence of solid nine carat gold, The Eagle of Glory Initial Ring is set to perfection with an impressive border of no less than twelve precious white diamonds. Then, for the ultimate finishing touch, this illustrious design comes to life with the image of two almighty eagles, embracing either side of this prestigious new work of art with majestic grace.

What's more, this spectacular new design can be engraved with the initial of your choice at no additional cost, and comes complete with a Certificate of Authenticity, confirming its valued status as a Brooks & Bentley original. In addition The Eagle of Glory Initial Ring will be delivered to your door displayed in a deluxe presentation box - perfect for gift giving.

The Eagle of Glory Initial Ring is available exclusively from Brooks & Bentley at the remarkable issue price of just £149.00* per magnificent work of art, payable in ten interest-free monthly instalments for your convenience.

ED WOOD

FilmFour 8.00pm

Tim Burton directs this biopic of quirky director Ed Wood (Johnny Depp), who has the dubious honour of being considered one of the worst directors of all time. The film follows Wood's quest to be an acclaimed film-maker and his friendship with horror legend Bela Lugosi.

LIVE EURO TOUR GOLF: COMPASS GROUP ENGLISH OPEN SKY SPORTS 1 10.30AM

The £800,000 Compass Group English Open tees off today at the Marriot Forest of Arden Hotel in Warwickshire. Last year saw Darren Clarke (pictured) repeat his 1999 victory in fine style. The Northern Ireland-born 32-year-old sank four straight long putts on the back nine to finish with a seven-under-par 65 and retain his title. Just one shot behind him on a tournament total of 276 were England's Mark James - who had been the last player to successfully defend this title back in 1990 - and New Zealand's Michael Campbell.

CABLE CHOICE

FILM

BLUE VELVET

FilmFour 10.00pm

Surreal director David Lynch is at his most quirky with this very black 1986 film. Starring Dennis Hopper, Isabella Rossellini, Kyle MacLachlan and Laura Dern, it tells the disturbing story of evil goings-on within a seemingly innocent, suburban town.

GENERAL

MENACING WATERS

Discovery 8.00pm

An exploration of the coastal waters off remote Northern Australia, where deadly marine creatures live alongside the most gentle animals, including the shy Irrawaddy dolphin. Marvel at the astounding footage of venomous fish and dangerous sea snakes.

LIVE FORD GOLF USA: FEDEX ST. JUDE CLASSIC SKY SPORTS 2 6.00PM

The second day's play at the FedEx St. Jude Classic from the TPC at Southwind, Memphis, Tennessee. Last year, Notah Begay (pictured) took the title with a one-stroke win over Bob May and Chris DiMarco. The tournament, which began its life as the Memphis Invitational Open back in 1958, took its present name in 1995 and offers a purse of $3.5m, with a winner's share of $630,000. If Begay triumphs this time around, he will be the first player to record back-to-back victories since Lee Trevino in 1971/72.
